No new books were added to the Library the past year as it was thought advisable to hold the balance of money on hand, and if the town saw fit to make the same appropriation as last year, the two together would provide a substantial addition in new books and also enable the Trustees to furnish a new catalogue, which is very much needed. In this way the new books would appear in the catalogue.

School Report.

TO THE LEGAL VOTERS IN THE DISTRICT OF BELMONT:

In keeping with a time-honored custom, and in compliance with the requirements of law, we desire to report to you our work and the school affairs of the District for the year now closing. We are pleased to report no serious difficulty and no discord or trouble of any moment. Any slight disagreement which may have arisen has been or may be settled in peace and amity.

The committee which was chosen at a special school meeting to build a wooden fire-escape upon the village school-house has performed the work assigned it, and constructed a convenient and safe structure upon the backside of the building. A door, which swings outward, opens from the book-room upon a commodious platform from which railed stairs properly covered, descend to the ground, and affords a safe and sufficient exit from the rooms on the second floor. This fire escape is an excellent entrance to the building and is used as such in cold blustering weather. It is much easier to keep the rooms warm when using this way of entering the building than when the front door is used. The money is well spent if the structure is never used for any other purpose.

During the year schools have been maintained in Jamestown Ladd Hill, Upper Province Road, and four of the village schools throughout the year. The Union, Lower Province Road and Second Primary in the village have had two terms each, ranging from 21 to 27 weeks. The Union and Lower Province Road schools were very small and for this and other sufficient reasons your School Board did not feel justified in giving them the third term. One of the teachers in the village asked for a leave of absence for the winter, and as the number of scholars was very much smaller than formerly we consolidated the schools so as to have only four departments, and they have been amply sufficient.

We regret having to report some serious interruption in the village schools in consequence of diphtheria and other contagious diseases. The schools took a recess of two weeks in the autumn and an irregular attendance followed during the last part of the term, and also during the winter term—the diseases have spread over the entire period and are now prevalent. We think the attendance has been more than fair under the circumstances, better than some times under favorable circumstances. In this connection we will call attention to the much smaller number of school children in the village part of the town. The number enrolled at the present time is the smallest since 1900. Last September, when the census was taken as required by law, the number was 168, of which number at least 32 must be deducted for legal and proper reasons leaving 136 who could be expected to attend school and of this number six are children of five years. Under these circumstances a fifth school is unnecessary and ought to be discontinued until the number of scholars is such as to demand it. When the fifth school was established the number of registered pupils was 178.

We think the schools as a whole, have made satisfactory progress and compare very favorably with schools of the same grade in other towns, and, when we consider the ages of the boys and girls who attend our schools, the comparison is very much in favor of Belmont. It may not be generally known that the scholars in the upper department of the village schools do not average over 13 years of age—some of them being only 11, and even less than that. We are obliged to recall our school-days and the men and women who were our school-mates. One has a right to question the system which demands so much of children of that tender age—children whose intellectual faculties are not sufficiently developed to grasp some parts of the various branches which must be studied in our public schools, but to step outside of that system would be to isolate ourselves from the rest of the world and produce unpleasant friction and confusion.

During the year now closing Belmont has had 17 pupils in higher schools—Tilton Seminary, Gilmanton Academy and Lacoניה High-school, for whom the town has to pay tuition. Thirteen of the number have attended through the entire year. We are satisfied that a larger number of boys and girls would attend a High-school if we had one in town. In this connection we must mention the comparatively large number of scholars who call for working certificates as soon as they reach their 14th birthday. Few of them are beyond the sixth grade, and many are below that. They are nearly all of foreign extraction, and the evil which has been quite serious in the past is becoming more so, and there are very strong indications that the upper grades will soon be entirely given up to our native Americans. To us this is an evil which threatens disaster. It might not be so disastrous if the children attended regularly until they were 14, but they do not, being kept from school on all kinds of pretexts. Nearly all the work of the Truant officer is in connection with this class. There are some noble exceptions. To them all honor is due.

Two items demand more than a passing notice as they cause much anxiety and and trouble to your School Board. The first is the small schools which is so near other small schools that a consolidation would work no hardship to any one, and would result in more interest, better schools, and a saving of money so as to lengthen the school-year. It was the intention of those who presented and secured the adoption of our present school law that such schools should be consolidated. Indeed the getting rid of these small schools was one of the main reasons for the enactment of the law. All educators approve of the uniting of small rural schools, and urge it in emphatic language. When the law went into effect four neighboring districts were united with the village district to the complete satisfaction of nearly all the people in them. To continue small schools in close proximity to other schools is a discrimination in their favor which violates both the letter and the spirit of the law. It seems to us that the uniting be done and universally approved where no pupil would be more than one and a half miles from a good school if his own was discontinued. An expression from the assembled district might simplify matters to some extent. The second item is the conveying of scholars. If all who demand conveyance were to be gratified a much smaller amount would be available for the support of your schools. During the past two years the amount spent for this purpose has exceeded by at least two hundred and fifty dollars what was formerly paid for the same object. It seems to us that the district should take at least part of the responsibility in this matter by calling a halt and demanding that money be spent in conveying scholars only in cases of absolute necessity.

The village schools are now (Feb. 15th) in session.
